

ELWELL'S MURDER UNSOLVED IN YEAR

Anniversary of Crime Finds
Police at Standstill in Regard to Shooting.

SHOW LITTLE INTEREST

Swann Turned Over Case to Whitman, but He Failed to Make Any Progress.

Yesterday was the anniversary of the murder of Joseph Elwell, bridge whist expert and turfman, who was found in his apartment in the early morning of June 11, 1920, dying of a bullet wound in the forehead. After a year's investigation by the District Attorney's office and the police, the crime remains unsolved.

All appearances pointed to homicide, for the authorities found no evidence that Elwell killed himself, or was the victim of an accidental shooting. Yet after twelve months the assassin is not known.

The Elwell mystery contained all the elements that go to make an interesting study in crime. The victim was well known for his skill as a bridge player and he gambled not only with cards, but with horses and with women's affections also.

The evening before his death Elwell was a member of a party that dined and danced at the Ritz-Carlton, and then visited the New Amsterdam Theatre. Elwell left his companions at 2 A. M. His housekeeper found him dying in his apartment at 241 West Seventieth street, at about 8:30 A. M. The revolver with which Elwell was killed was not in the room when the police searched it.

When the housekeeper discovered the body of Elwell it was clad in pajamas, reclining in an armchair.

Defeated in his investigation, District Attorney Swann turned over all papers in the case to ex-Gov. Whitman during the latter's investigation last April of the city administration. Gov. Whitman took up a cold trail, frankly admitted the difficulty of attempting to find the slayer almost a year after the murder, and has made no headway.

Roy Harris, a former New York apartment house elevator man, "confessed" to complicity in the Elwell murder to the Buffalo police on April 6. Later he admitted his story of the murder was a lie.

Since Harris brought attention to the case apparently little interest has been shown in the mystery by the authorities.

CITIZENS GIVE $350,000.

Salvation Army Collects That Amount in Fund Campaign.

The national headquarters of the Salvation Army issued a statement yesterday showing that $350,000 had been collected in Greater New York since the drive of the home service fund began a few weeks ago. The target for which the drive aimed was $500,000.

Of the amount subscribed, Manhattan gave $302,000, an increase of more than 30 per cent. over subscriptions in 1920; The Bronx gave $13,000, an increase of 86 per cent.; Brooklyn gave $23,000, a decrease of 54 per cent.; and Queens gave $12,000, an increase of 300 per cent. The drive will end on June 17.

5,100 LOST ARTICLES REMAIN UNCLAIMED

Long Island Railroad Has Wide Variety on Hand.

Although more than 7,500 samples of almost everything that could be lost in a railroad train were found in its cars by the Long Island Railroad Company last year, only 2,500 of them were claimed afterward by their owners. All told, only 33 per cent. of all lost articles of this sort got back to their owners. The most valuable thing in the collection was a brief case, containing about $3,000 in cash in pay envelopes. That was claimed by the loser rather hurriedly and did not lie desolately around the lost and found department's warehouse.

But the unclaimed stuff varied from mittens to sable coats, from eye glasses to Springfield rifles and parrots to babies. A hundred dollar bill was handed over to the finder—a trainman—after all efforts to restore it to its loser failed. According to the statement issued yesterday by the railroad company regarding this situation, it was said that the railroad holds such salvage for ninety days, when, should the owner fail to materialize, it lawfully becomes the property of the person finding it.
